ABS Altman Warwick Arranges a 30-year Fixed-Rate Loan for 162 Fifth Ave.

Flatiron District Building Currently Fully Occupied by Simons Foundation and JP Morgan Chase

(New York – October 10, 2018) – ABS Altman Warwick, a New York City-based capital market advisory firm, today announced the closing of a large permanent loan for the 12-story, newly-renovated office building at 162 Fifth Avenue in New York City. The 145,000-square-foot building includes added penthouse, boardroom and garden space and is owned by long-time clients of the firm.

The 30-year, self-amortizing loan was provided by a major life insurance company at an attractive rate of just over four percent. The building is currently 100 percent occupied by JP Morgan Chase on the street-level and the Simons Foundation, a philanthropic organization founded by mathematician and legendary hedge-fund manager and philanthropist James Simons and his wife Marilyn, on floors 2-12. The Simons Foundation supports research in mathematics, astrophysics, bio-sciences and the treatment and diagnosis of autism.

“By capitalizing on an exceptionally flat yield curve, we were able to provide the borrower with the benefit of a 30-year fixed-rate loan for essentially the same price of a 10-year loan” said Brian Warwick, Co-Managing Partner of ABS Altman Warwick. “By having the loan maturity match the both the Simon’s lease term and borrower’s long-term hold strategy, we able to eliminate future interest rate risk and protect the property’s in-place cash flow, resulting in the optimal financing structure for the borrower.”

According to Gregg Schenker, President and Co-Managing Partner of ABS Partners Real Estate, LLC, “the property owners are very pleased with the outcome of this financing transaction which succeeded due to the terrific long-term lender relationships of Bob Altman and Brian Warwick.”
